Connecticut town terrorized by 6-foot snapping turtle!

GIANT 6-FOOT SNAPPING TURTLE TERRORIZES CONNECTICUT TOWN!

By JACK ALEXANDER/ Staff writer

Terrified folks in a quiet neighborhood are deathly afraid to go outside at night ever since a construction worker nearly had his head bitten off by a giant swamp creature — a huge, six-foot-long snapping turtle.

'It tried to bite my head off,' says construction worker!

TRACKING THE MONSTER: Luis Villarreal, left, and Joe Izzo follow path made by the giant turtle.

"I pick up my children at the bus stop in my car," said a frightened mother. "I don't want them walking home or playing in the yard until that 'thing' is captured or killed."

Two men and a teenage boy have come face-to-face with the monstrous turtle in the swamp behind a West Haven, Conn. street — and one of them almost didn't make it back alive.

Tony Buonomo, a town committee chairman, tells what happened to his friend and neighbor, Joe Izzo.

"Joe and his friend Luis Villarreal were doing work on his house when they noticed that someone or something had made a four-foot-wide path in the eight-foot-high swamp reeds. They wanted to find out what it was.

"They were about 30 feet deep in the swamp when they came to a halt in the path. Izzo looked in one direction, and when Luis looked the other way, the creature lunged for his head.

"Luis said the powerful jaws of the turtle came within inches of decapitating him."

The two men high-tailed it out of the swamp as fast as they could and pounded on Buonomo's front door.

"Call the police. Call the national guard," Joe screamed and three feet wide.

Buonomo and three other men nervously ventured into the swamp that night with weapons and flashlights, but did not find a trace of the titanic turtle.

Assistant Dog Warden Jack Lawlor accompanied Buonomo back into the eerie swamp the next morning.

"I can only tell you it is a huge animal," Lawlor said, looking at the trail through the swamp reeds.

Four days later, Izzo's son Tony took a different path through the swamp and saw the creature slowly walking toward him about 30 feet away. He ran out of the swamp.

"Fortunately, the monster is no faster than most turtles. But if you get within reach of his snapping jaws, you could end up dead," Buonomo said.

Buonomo and other homeowners believe the ravenous creature is invading the neighborhood looking for food. Pet rabbits, cats and small dogs have mysteriously disappeared between dusk and dawn.

"First thing you know, one of our kids is going to turn up missing," he added.

NASA TRACKS ASTEROID MADE OF DIAMONDS

GLISTENING CLUSTER of gemstones is expected to hit Earth in a matter of weeks.

SPACE ROCK was discovered by Bertrand Millier.

. . . and it's heading for Earth!

Scientists at NASA are rushing to calculate the exact point where Earth will be hit by a rapidly approaching giant asteroid — a quarter-mile-wide space rock made of diamonds!

By TANYA BRODER
Correspondent

The speeding object is expected to slam into our planet within a matter of weeks, but sources at the U.S. space agency say it is unclear at this time where it will hit. Excited experts expect the diamond-rich rock to survive its fiery passage through the Earth's atmosphere and deliver a payload of gleaming "ice" that will make the country in which it lands incredibly rich!

"They're calling it a cosmic lottery," said one NASA source, who spoke on the condition of anonymity. "This thing is a treasure trove. Our experts calculate that it contains such a vast quantity of high-grade diamonds that it will depress diamond prices worldwide when it hits.

"They have figured it will be worth trillions of dollars even if the diamonds it contains are clustered only on the surface. If it is pure diamond through and through — which is what they believe it is — it would be worth much, much more."

The asteroid was discovered September 7 by French astronomer Bertrand Millier, but its composition was not known until American scientists used infrared photos and computer enhancement to study the approaching object.

Photos of the asteroid show it sparkling and gleaming as it revolves in the sun. Scientists at first assumed the sunlight was reflecting off ice on the asteroid's surface, but later learned that the object contained no water — and therefore could not contain ice on its surface.

"With more study, NASA experts determined that the asteroid was made of high-grade diamonds," the NASA source said. "Basically, this thing is just tons and tons of the best quality gemstone, hurtling among the hardest substances known, the asteroid is nearly indestructible and scientists predict it will pass through the atmosphere intact. If it splashes down in the ocean there will be a free-for-all as nations fight to recover it. But if it lands on terra firma, some nation somewhere in the world is going to be very, very wealthy overnight."

Doctors at Walter Reed Army Medical

ABE LINCOLN'S REVIVED!

By BEATRICE DEITCH
Special correspondent

In a hush-hush experiment that succeeded beyond scientists' wildest dreams, doctors administered an amazing new drug to the corpse of Abraham Lincoln — and brought the former President back to life!

The mummified remains of the dead American leader moved, spoke and even wept during the breathtaking 95 seconds that Lincoln was conscious, witnesses say. Lincoln then died again.

"The doctors were expecting to start up the heart and perhaps see some brain waves — but they weren't expecting Lincoln to actually revive in complete consciousness," said a witness to the amazing experiment, a nurse who agreed to speak anonymously. "Everyone was just stunned. It was an amazing thing to see."

Doctors wanted to test the experimental drug Revivital for the first time on the body of a famous American to dramatize their work and win public support for the experiment, sources say. They selected the corpse of Lincoln because it was remarkably well preserved, according to witnesses who participated in the experimental procedure performed at Walter Reed Army Medical Center several weeks ago. Although Lincoln died 128 years ago, his remains were in excellent shape, the skin leathery but dry and tough, the facial features and limbs still defined, the internal organs in good condition.

The former President's body was exhumed and brought to a hospital operating room under conditions of extreme secrecy. As a video camera recorded the bizarre procedure, doctors soaked the corpse in a special solution to soften its dehydrated flesh and then injected the wonder "resurrection drug."

"A few minutes after the drug was injected, Lincoln began to show signs of life," the nurse said. "The doctors got a heartbeat and pulse, then faint brainwaves. Pretty soon we noticed he was breathing on his own and then to our amazement the entire body began to squirm on the operating table.

"The dead man opened his eyes and moved his lips and then we all clearly heard him say, 'Gentlemen, where am I?' The doctors were trying to calm him when he began having breathing difficulties, lost consciousness and died. The whole thing happened in a little over a minute and a half."

Doctors originally intended to announce the results of their experiment in a pharmaceuticals journal this November, but were so amazed when the drug brought Lincoln completely alive again that they decided to delay announcing their find.

"This is a drug that can change the world," the source said. "When it is perfected and its effects can be prolonged, it will actually eliminate death.

"The drug's developers are afraid that if word gets out now there will be a desperate scramble for Revivital, with people — and agencies — willing to do anything to get their hands on the drug. They don't want any trouble. They want to keep this secret until they decide how to handle such a breakthrough without problems."

TV station broadcasts suicide to boost ratings

Controversy is still raging in Brazil over a TV show that tried to boost its ratings — by televising a suicide!

The show called Aqui Ahora broadcast footage of a teenage girl who jumped to her death from a Sao Paulo shopping mall.

When she didn't die right away, the sensation-loving ghouls even had their cameras follow her to the hospital where she died. Representatives of the SBT television channel don't seem too concerned about the outrage the program caused — ratings soared when the piece was shown, reaching an estimated 60 million homes.

Supper tasted great — 'til hubby learned what it was!

Loving wife Doris Clewiston gave her gourmet husband the shock of his life when she told him the name of the dish she had served him for dinner — cockroach heads and rice!

Ronald Clewiston gobbled down nearly half of the wretched concoction before his wife told him what he was eating.

When the Cape Town, South Africa teacher learned the sickening truth, he rushed out to a nearby emergency room where he was examined and released.

But he was sick to his stomach for a week.

Doris knew her husband loved Chinese food and when she found the recipe in an old cookbook called Meals From Around The World, she thought he'd be delighted with the dish.

She spent weeks gathering up all the cockroaches she could find, cutting off their heads and putting the heads in the freezer.

When she'd collected a pint of them, she mixed them in tomato sauce and served them over rice.

"It was such an exotic dish," tearful Doris told reporters.

Nurse sues doctor — for squirting her with blood from baby's umbilical cord!

By SUSAN JAMISON / Staff writer

ODESSA, Texas — Respiratory therapist Bobbie Heaney is suing obstetrician Dr. William McIntosh, accusing him of squirting her with blood from a severed umbilical cord.

The 36-year-old divorcee says she was assisting in a delivery when the incident occurred. She is asking $100,000 for "extreme emotional distress," claiming that she was shattered by the bloodbath and still worries she might have contracted a disease from the incident.

A lawyer for Dr. McIntosh says his client denies the allegations, but Mrs. Heaney's attorney, Michael McLeaish, insists it happened the way the mother of two described it.

"She was enraged and she was terrified that possibly she might have gotten HIV," said the woman's lawyer.

"She was so shocked and overwhelmed she left the room. It was a fighting insult and it wasn't accidental."

McLeaish says his client was assisting Dr McIntosh with a childbirth when she noticed that he was covered with blood and commented on the fact.

"She made a remark that he was bloody and he turned around and sprayed her with the severed umbilical cord which was still attached to the mother," said McLeaish.

"My client says the obstetrician then commented, 'I couldn't have done that better if I'd planned it.' She felt it was spontaneous, but that he had done it because he was mad about her remark."

SNEAKY CHEF SPIKES FOOD WITH OPIUM

...to hook customers & keep 'em coming back for more!

BEIJING — Clever chef Chen Tai-si served the greasiest meals in town, but patrons packed his roach-infested restaurant night and day till cops closed him down — for secretly spiking his food with opium!

By JOE BERGER
Staff writer

"This man was the world's worst cook, but he was making money like crazy — because customers got so hooked on his 'special seasoning' that they kept coming back for more," said peeved public health official Huang Shu-min.

"His regulars all realized the food was terrible, but they'd get these awful cravings to eat there and they couldn't figure out why. They didn't know he'd turned them all into opium addicts."

Police say wily Tai-si, 48, began his shenanigans two years ago, shortly after opening a seedy eatery called the Singing Sun in the business section of the city.

"It was a little restaurant and quite dirty, but his menu was very pretentious," said chief investigator Chu Ying-yi.

"He served rat tail stuck in holes and wild duck in lotus leaves and dog's leg with oyster sauce — all of them delicacies.

"The trouble was, his food was so tough and greasy and tasteless that nobody could eat it. Business was slow."

But all that changed when the shifty chef devised a seasoning made from poppy paste — the basic ingredient in opium — and began adding it to all his lousy chow.

"Everyone hated my food so much I knew I'd have to go out of business if I didn't think of something fast," tricky Tai-si said later. "So my brother suggested I add opium to the food to get people hooked.

"And it worked. I added my special seasoning to everything and before I knew it, customers were lining up around the block. Everyone still complained about the food, but they were always there the next day, begging for more."

And even the Singing Sun's most faithful patrons couldn't understand why the dingy eatery was so popular.

"Sometimes the meat was so tough you could barely chew it and the sauces had puddles of grease in them," recalled former customer Ki Yeh. "But I always felt so fine, so relaxed when I walked out of there — and if I didn't eat in the Singing Sun for a couple of days, I would get a real urge to go there again. I never dreamed Tai-si had made me a drug addict."

But the rascally restaurateur's goose was cooked when health officials showed up for a surprise inspection and stumbled onto Tai-si's secret. He was convicted of distributing opium and sentenced to 23 years in prison. "The agents who were sent to the Singing Sun had been told to inspect the place very carefully," said chief investigator Chu. "Everyone was suspicious because we couldn't figure out how somebody could serve that garbage and get so many people to eat it."

Miracle Bible survives fire!

Tony Adams' home burned to the ground and everything he owned was reduced to ashes — everything but his Bible, which escaped unscathed!

"If you could see the extent of the fire's damage, it would make a believer out of you," said the fireman who found the Good Book in the smoking remains of the house. "I can tell you it's not a coincidence."

The 39-year-old Gastonia, N.C., man said the Bible is his most prized possession and he is convinced it was spared for a reason. "God is trying to tell me something," he said. "He wants me to know He's there for me."

Cannibals in space!

Scientists say some kind of invisible dark matter is literally eating a nearby galaxy!

"What we're witnessing is galactic cannibalism in action," says Astronomer Douglas Lin, of the University of California.

Lin says that most of the universe is composed of this mysterious substance and that it's the gravitational pull of the dark matter that's causing the galaxy to be devoured.

Bank Robbery? —It's Legal!

People all over the U.S. are grabbing thousands of dollars from banks by following the advice of a shocking new book called Bank Robbery.

Surprisingly, both the book and its methods are perfectly legal.

Technically, the money is just a "loan." However, thanks to a legal loophole, you can keep the "loan" as long as you like — all you have to do is make minimum payments.

Almost anyone can take $500 to $5,000 from a bank just by filling out a special, little-known form. Do it at several banks and you'll get $20,000 or more. Even some playful people can get money, using the easy steps that the book explains in plain detail.

Other amazing secrets explain methods how to cancel debts without bankruptcy, stop bill collectors, erase bad credit records and get all kinds of credit cards easily. The author of this book has many different credit cards.

Even if you don't need credit right now, you can get the loan pre-approved in case you lose your job, have unexpected expenses or find a hot investment.

Getting money from right-fisted banks is now so easy that many bankers are burning mad. One even sent a nasty letter to the publisher. There's no telling how long this book will be available or the loopholes will continue to exist. So you should order your copy right away.

The price is $19 — but you can get it for free. How? Nowadays, most bank cards charge annual fees of $15 to $20. But you'll find out how to get the card without paying the fee — so just that one piece of knowledge will pay for the book.

They even guarantee that you'll get the loan or credit you need — or they'll send your money back if you show you were turned down.

Get this explosive, revealing book today, while it's still available. Send $19 to Discovery Publishers Dept. 340-D 11360 Veirs Mill Rd. L-15, Wheaton, MD. 20902. Do it

THIS IS HOW HANUSSEN (clairvoyant and adviser) HELPS HIS FRIENDS

J.C. CURE:

" HANUSSEN sent me a "GOLDEN" Pendulum. I used it for 10 minutes - then $ 318,165.00!"

HANUSSEN HELPS YOU FREE*!

I am HANUSSEN.

Perhaps you know me from TV ... newspapers.

More and more people confirm my supernatural powers.: I ALREADY KNOW TOMORROW TODAY.

But one thing is especially important to me: I want to help my FRIENDS all over the world, quickly and effectively.

Today, I want to help you!

This time I want to do it with money. WITH CASH (later I want to help you in other ways: job... private life... psychological problems).

If you need money urgently, truly urgently, there is a means with which you will succeed.

the »GOLDEN« Pendulum!

More and more people are using it in Europe. With fantastic results. This method is brand new in America. That is why you should be one of the first who will WIN THE PRIZE OF HIS LIFE with this method (before there are thousands of FIRST PRIZE WINNERS). On request, I will send you such a pendulum.

And the money can start pouring in to you!

First you must decide where you want to win a lot of money: in LOTTO... in the LOTTERY (where legally permissible). At the RACETRACK ... etc. After that, I will show you how to use the pendulum. You take the "object" into your hand and let it swing (it is easy – very easy. Everyone can do it.) Then you the number 1 ... 2 ... 3 ... 17 ... 30 ... 35 ...! And your »GOLDEN« Pendulum will always answer immediately: YES or NO. (That takes a few minutes, but what's 10 minutes for perhaps millions of dollars...!)

Then you play the numbers that you have found: in LOTTO, in the LOTTERY, in the RACE TRACK, (where legally permissible).

IT IS THAT SIMPLE TO BE LUCKY. YOU ONLY HAVE TO KNOW HOW!

If you want to become my FRIEND today, then I want to help you!

WHO IS HANUSSEN?

His predecessor was brutally killed by the Nazis in Germany in 1930 – because he had prophesied the end of Hitler's Reich. HANUSSEN succeeded was raised in orphanages ... under the poorest of circumstances. But this great misery developed his supernatural powers even more: He predicted GORBACHEV ... the EARTHQUAKE in [redacted] ... the BERLIN WALL ... HANUSSEN has [redacted] FRIENDS in Europe.

NOW HE IS IN AMERICA!

Send in your FREE COUPON today, because now these materials are still free of charge. Postage and handling will be refunded if you are not 100% satisfied!

AND HERE IS MORE PROOF OF HOW A PENDULUM CAN HELP YOU, TOO:

1,7 million dollars!

A 39 year old salesman has won 1,7 million dollars in the lottery by using a rather unusual method. In four nights "sessions" he determined his lucky numbers with a Pendulum.

Ape wins $5,000 photo contest!

PUN-LOVING orangutan Plato has always enjoyed playing with his owner's camera — and now he's a prizewinning photographer!

By GILES LANE / Correspondent

Contest judges went bananas after they awarded $5,000 for a first-place photo of a kissy-faced orangutan — then learned the prizewinning photographer was an ape!

The hilarious photo was entered by Pete Kruger in a contest sponsored by an advertising firm. But the finger that pushed the button belonged to Plato, one of the dozens of endangered apes on Kruger's South African estate.

The judges picked this picture — then found out a monkey took it!

"I let Plato use my camera one day and he took a series of shots of his mate Millie mugging at the camera," explained Kruger, 52.

"I entered it in the contest as a joke. It's a cute shot, but I never thought for a minute it would be chosen the winner.

"I'm a little embarrassed by it all, but the contest rules didn't stipulate that the photos have to be taken by humans."

Officials at Contesto, Inc., a Johannesburg agency that ran the photo contest, say they were shocked to find that their prizewinner was an ape. But they're trying to be good sports about it.

"It was clearly the best photo," said agency chief Derek Bateman. "On the other hand, having an ape for a winner limits what we can do. We can't interview an ape, we can't send him on tours, we can't have him appear on TV talk shows.

"We've been in touch with Mr. Kruger and we're discussing how to work this. Perhaps we can think of exciting orangutan-oriented activities that will give us a lot of publicity and make our clients happy."

Kruger says his pet learned photography by fooling around with an old Nikon camera he used around his estate.

Sometimes Kruger would leave a roll of film in the camera and have it developed after Plato had taken a few frames with it.

"I've been doing that for years," Kruger says. "He learned how to use my camera by watching me. A lot of times the focus and exposure are way off. But every now and then he hits everything right on the button.

"The photo of Millie may have been an accident, but I think it's really top-notch — and the judges agreed!"

Since the contest results were announced, word of Plato's photo work has spread and now art galleries as far away as England, France and

Los Angeles art salon is negotiating with Pete to exhibit some of the animal's other works in a one-man show ... or rather a one-APE show.

"I can come up with about 35 of his photos for the show," Pete said. "I'm interested to see if anyone buys one. It's 6 ways to attract a lover like a magnet!

By JOHN XAVIER / Special correspondent

Fascinating research has finally revealed the six secrets of success with the opposite sex — and they're guaranteed to make you irresistible!

Psychologist and researcher Elaine Hatfield says her 15-year study of what attracts men and women to each other has turned up the characteristics necessary to captivate the opposite sex.

She wrote about them extensively in her book, A New Look at Love, and here they are in brief:

1. HONESTY: "We all have some bad characteristics and taboo feelings. But actually that is appealing. You're more likely to be attractive to others if you try to be honest with your emotions and be straight about what and who you are. Just be yourself, you'll be a much more interesting person."

2. INCONSISTENCY: "Consistency generates little emotion. It's inconsistency that we respond to. If a person always treats us with love and respect, we take that person for granted. It becomes a ho-hum relationship. Passion demands arousal — and unpleasant experiences, such as an argument, are just as arousing as pleasant ones."

3. FUN: If you want to maintain a loving relationship, you must associate that special person with pleasure — and he or she must do the same about you. That's why romantic dinners are so important. "We like people who are associated with good times and dislike people who are associated with bad times."

4. BEING RELAXED: "Social psychologists have found that it's the easygoing, relaxed persons who most attracts the opposite sex. In fact, it counts more than money, good looks or personality."

5. ATTRACTIVENESS: "It has been found from studies in the United States, Canada, Germany and Japan that you generally marry someone who is just about as attractive as you. It's your attractiveness as a total package that counts. This includes intellect, social grace and understanding. To make yourself as attractive as you possibly can, determine your greatest strengths and think of how you can make the most of your assets. Then look for a person who will be unusually appreciative of your talents."

6. EXCITEMENT: "Love is going to flourish if it's nurtured by good experiences — and a sprinkling of irritating or even painful experiences. Strange as it may sound, adrenaline makes the heart grow fonder."

Naked granny scares thieves!

When Carol Henderson saw a pair of thieves trying to steal a car, she dashed out of her house and chased them, screaming at the top of her lungs — as naked as a jaybird!

"I wondered why they looked so amazed when they saw me running down the street."

50-year-old Carol told cops in Gateshead, England.

She said she didn't remember she was naked until she noticed her neighbors peering out their windows at her.

Deaf people are the best drivers!

A three-year study in several major U.S. cities found that a driver who can hear is 11 times more likely to have a car wreck than a deaf driver. Researchers concluded deaf drivers concentrate on the road more than drivers who are constantly fiddling with the car radio and talking on cellular phones.

KA-BOOB!

Woman's breast explodes while scuba diving!

DISMAYED Donna Keller will need major plastic surgery to repair the injuries to her breast

Scuba diver Donna Keller was hospitalized after a dive off Vera Cruz, Mexico — because her right boob exploded while she was underwater!

Doctors told the 37-year-old secretary from Boston, Mass., that her right breast implant had exploded as a result of changes in pressure caused by her deep dive. She spent several weeks in serious condition with an infection, two broken ribs and severe damage to the muscles of her chest wall, then was released to convalesce at home. Doctors predict she will need major plastic surgery to repair injuries to her 36-inch, D-cup breast.

"I was coming up from a 100-foot dive when all of a sudden I felt this horrible pain in my chest," said Donna, the divorced mother of a 4-year-old daughter.

"There was this feeling of incredible pressure and then

I could see that my dive vest was in shreds.

"I didn't know what happened until I got on the boat and they took my dive suit off. I nearly fainted when I saw my right breast was gone."

Bleeding profusely, Donna was rushed by divers and taken immediately to an emergency room.

Doctors succeeded in removing scores of silicone fragments and repairing much of the muscle and tissue damage done by the blast.

A severe infection caused by contact with seawater required weeks to cure and Donna is still not as strong as she was before the mishap.

Donna says the scars left by the exploding breast implant are extremely unsightly. And since her left breast implant is still intact, she now has a lopsided look.

"My doctors say they will do plastic surgery as soon as I've healed completely from the explosion," Donna said. "But they've warned me that it'll never look normal. The force of the blast tore me up so bad they can't replace all the layers of lost muscle and flesh.

"They told me I was lucky I survived at all: If my left breast had blown up, they say, it would have blasted into my heart and killed me."

How about that Max Von Sydow? The Swedish-born actor is the first guy to play both God and Satan in major studio productions.

FISHERMAN CATCHES A LIVE BABY BOY!

LUCKY Aaron Mister says his life is a bargain

By TANYA BRODER

Angler Arthur Flancer dropped his line in the water — and snagged a drowning baby boy by the diaper!

The fisherman's incredible catch saved the life of Little Aaron Mister (1) months, who had wandered away from his home near the Leonard River in Glasterbury, South Africa, and fallen in the water.

Ed's new plan to keep greedy docs honest!

Make surgeons show us our old body parts

— just like car mechanics do when they replace worn-out carburetors!

I'm madder than a heart surgeon with a scratch on his Porsche at those greedy sawbones across America who are raising hell about my plan to protect poor patients like you and me.

I was having a new water pump put on my 1960 Aston Martin when it hit me like a lightning bolt — my mechanic asked if I wanted the old part or I could be sure he got a brand new one.

Most auto repair shops in fact are required by law to show you the engine, brake or transmission parts that have been replaced. So why not doctors? They repair me right, folks.

I'm pushing for a federal law that requires surgeons to — at your request — show the old body parts they remove or replace.

It's easy to keep a used kidney on ice in the hospital. They should bring it in on a tray or in a glass jar after the operation for you to see.

Otherwise, how could you catch the bad guy who sells you a used heart and tells you it's brand new? Two years later, you'd have to shell out those cash to have the same damn thing repaired.

Since guys for years have had implants. You should demand that you be given your old heart to take home or flush down the toilet. Or even have it freeze-dried if you wanted. That way you'd be sure once and for all that you'd been given a new heart and not your grocery's worth.

Some guys for lungs, appendixes, gall bladders, livers, eyes, assorted hysterectomies, parts and so on. Let's face it

Heel implants make man 3 inches taller!

By JOE BERGEN

Frantic Daniel Eroskin stood a good three inches shorter than his lanky ladylove Tracy Borkowski and it bugged the businessman so much he visited a surgeon — and got silicone heel implants to make him taller!

Now debonair Daniel can look his sweetie straight in the eye — and the Boston bakery owner insists the bizarre surgery has made a new man of him.

"I felt like such a wimp walking around at 5-foot-7 with a 5-foot, 10-inch woman on my arm," the beanpole bachelor told reporters.

"Everywhere that we went, I had the terrible feeling that people were looking at us and laughing behind our backs.

"They said she loved me just the way I was, but I always figured she'd love me a little more if I wasn't so damn short, you know.

"And the longer we went out, the more embarrassing it got."

Finally, desperate Daniel, 38, sent off for a pair of mail-order elevator shoes, hoping they'd give his outlook on life a much needed lift.

"But when I got 'em, they looked so ugly and clunky I couldn't bring myself to wear them in public," he recalled.

"I figured in those things I'd look as stupid as a bald guy in a hat wig."

So the eager pair persuaded a plastic surgeon to install three-inch heel implants to get him walking tall once and for all.

"I had to go all the way to Mexico to get it done because ten doctors around here all acted like I was crazy to even think of getting implants in my shoes — but boy, it was worth it," delighted Daniel insists.

"I have to get my shoes specially made and I guess I do walk a little funny, but you've got to treat me with respect now that I'm not so short.

"And for the first time ever Tracy and I can dance cheek to cheek — and she doesn't have to feel like she's dancing with her little brother.

"I truly think getting heel implants was the smartest thing I ever did."

For proof, Daniel points to certain "bare spots" he used with a sigh. "But at least I've got the original feet to cover."

'It's the smartest thing I ever did,' says Boston baker

Peeping Tom boss used hidden mirror to watch lady lifeguards take showers

The program director of a suburban Pittsburgh YMCA was fired and fined after he was caught spying on young female lifeguards — while they were stark naked in the shower!

John Sisel, 25, was nabbed by an undercover cop who followed him to a secret room in the Baldwin YMCA branch where he crawled out to a chair and watch the nude lifeguards through a two-way mirror.

"He was caught on the act," declared Baldwin Police Chief Robert Kelly.

Sisel, who pleaded guilty to charges of stalking-harassment, was fired from his YMCA job and ordered to pay a fine.

His undoing came when the lifeguards, who ranged in age from 14 to 21, decided to do a little snooping after they realized their boss disappeared every time they hit the showers. They tracked him to a little room between two walls where he could sit and watch through a one-way mirror as they stripped, showered and dressed.

Former Commie beauties on the prowl for American men — whether they're married or not!

By SUSAN [illegible]

Hang on to your hubbies, gals — because carloads of ex-Communist cuties would give their eyeteeth to snag your American man!

The husband-hungry women - citizens of hard-hit, economically devastated Russia — are lining up to join matchmaking services like the one run by London entrepreneur Leonard Jacque. They want to come to America in the worst way — and they'd even steal married guys from their wives to get here.

"Russian women think highly of American men and they are attracted by the life style," explained Jacque, whose agency is called Moscow Connection. "They are women who want a nice man to settle down with. They want to live in the West because there are dreadful hardships in Russia."

For a fee, matchmakers like Jacque send photos and descriptions of luscious ladies to interested men and match up couples according to compatibility. Couples can then correspond with one another and arrange a meeting if they wish.

Chances are good no names will follow.

Since Jacque started his agency in 1989 a number of rival matrimonial services have entered the business and thousands of ravishing Russkies have signed up to find a husband.

A whopping 95 percent of them have found American husbands, and many of them have dumped their wives for a Russian beauty, critics claim.

Creep confesses to murder — on family's answering machine!

Francis Perlmutter

By JACK ALEXANDER Staff writer

A family returning home from vacation was dumbfounded when they turned on their answering machine to get their messages — and heard a total stranger confess to a murder.

Cain-nidden Francis Perlmutter apparently dialed the wrong number when he called a friend to admit he strangled the manager of the building he lived in, Robert Frankum, 47, and stuffed the body in a refrigerator, cops said.

Perlmutter, 39, left his horror story with a six-minute message about the murder, cops said. The shocked family, who wasn't identified, later reported it to police in St. Paul, Minn.

"He referred back to the slaying several times," Police Sgt. Robert Parnell said. "He talked about what he felt and what he might do. I guess he was talking about committing suicide."

Unfortunately police couldn't match the recordings confession to Frankum's death until the body was discovered three days later by apartment building owner Al Kremer.

Kremer was concerned when he couldn't find Frankum and filed a missing person report. A half hour later he opened Frankum's refrigerator and made the gruesome discovery.

"I opened it up and there he was with plastic wrapped around his head," Kremer told police.

Police believe Perlmutter killed the manager because he wouldn't let him move from one apartment to another. He had quarreled with a neighbor and wanted to move, cops said.

"We have no idea why he put the guy in the fridge," Det. Parnell said. "He may have been trying to hide the body."

Perlmutter was jailed on a second-degree murder charge. A grand jury will decide if he should be indicted for first degree murder.

Little Mandy Veldmerz was dying of deadly leukemia until she was cured by a miracle doctor — a ghost physician who came from Heaven and healed her with his hands!

The 8 year old child had been sent home from the hospital to die when she was visited by the eerie spirit and ever since then she has shown no signs of the disease that was snuffing out her life!

"It was a miracle and it happened right before our eyes," recalled the child's father Andy, 31, a used-car salesman who lives with his family in a farm outside of Little Rock, Ark.

"We discovered she had a terrible fever and we were trying to keep her cool with damp cloths and ice. We watched her weakening minute by minute. We knew she was dying but the roads were flooded and the phones were out and we couldn't get help."

Andy says he and his wife Cynthia took turns nursing their daughter, but they knew they were fighting a losing battle.

Then, suddenly, Mandy's fever broke and she fell into a deep sleep.

Shattered Cynthia began praying aloud for her child. Suddenly a clap of thunder shattered the air and a flash of lightning illuminated the room.

"I looked up and realized that there was someone standing near my daughter's bed, a man wearing a white lab coat and looking at Mandy with the gentlest expression on his face," Andy said. "His clothes looked like something a doctor might wear in the Middle Ages."

Terrified, Cynthia grabbed a crucifix and held it out in front of her as the mysterious visitor moved closer.

"I was frightened, but I knew I had to do something," she said. "I thought he was going to hurt Mandy."

But the stranger ignored Cynthia and continued to move toward the bed.

"I was paralyzed with fear," Cynthia said. "I couldn't move except that I could see right through him."

The Waldenvoms watched in amazement as the gray haired man approached their daughter's bed and motioned them to move aside.

"Cynthia was frightened and didn't want to move, but I took her by the arm and led her away," Andy said. "I sensed that the stranger was here to help Mandy. I didn't know who or what he was, but I felt he was our little girl's only hope."

BABY ELECTROCUTED . . . when heart monitor is plugged into wall socket!

Tears of joy turned to heartbreak for the parents of 12-day-old baby Stratton Vasilakos who was electrocuted when his heart monitor was plugged into a wall socket!

"It appears 120 volts of electricity zapped his tiny body for probably minutes," said Illinois' Cook County Medical Examiner, Edmund Donoghue Jr.

The grieving parents have sued the manufacturer of an apnea monitor used to treat their son.

"This monitor was unreasonably dangerous because it was designed for use with a power cord that could be disconnected from the back of the monitor," said attorney Philip Corboy.

"The baby's body went rigid and paramedics in the nursery smelled something burning," said an investigator. The baby's chest bore two burn marks where the electrical leads had been connected.

The 7-pound, 14-ounce tot was apparently born healthy except for a low blood sugar problem, doctors said.

He was kept in the hospital to be monitored for hypoglycemia, which can cause breathing problems.

Doctors at Christ Hospital in Oak Lawn told the parents they wanted to raise the baby's blood sugar levels and started feeding him through a vein tube and later by a bottle.

Distraught parents Diane and George Vasilakos received a phone call from the hospital saying that there was a problem with their baby.

They drove to the hospital and were ushered into a room where the chaplain was waiting.

"As soon as I saw Mrs. C I knew but no one would tell us anything," Diane said.

A doctor gave the parents the sad news a few minutes later.

"They had a healthy baby, and 12 days later the baby dies," said an attorney.

Instead of taking their baby home, the heartbroken pair opted to bury him in Evergreen Cemetery.

"He was gaining weight, eating a lot," said the tearful mom. "All the nurses loved him because he was a cuddly little thing."

SWEET SMELL OF SUCCESS

New clinic treats bad breath!

A fancy new clinic has opened to treat a long-ignored problem that causes pain and embarrassment for millions of Americans: Bad breath!

The Philadelphia medical center opened in January of this year and has already treated 500 people and heard from more than 5,000 would-be patients from all over the country, according to its founder, Dr. Jon L. Richter.

"Some of these poor souls have been asking their dentists and physicians for years for help but have essentially been told, 'Go brush your teeth and leave me alone,'" said Dr. Richter, a periodontist. "But the fact is, for some people, bad breath is ruining their lives."

Dr. Richter says most halitosis is caused by bacterial infections, which he treats by gently scraping and spraying gums with a germicide and then disinfecting the gums once a week for a few weeks.

Emotional problems can make people feel

Experts now believe emotional problems — not an uncontrollable sweet tooth — may be the real cause of obesity.

WOMAN TICKS LIKE A CLOCK!

Loretta Whelan has a rare ailment that causes a commotion wherever she goes, baffles doctors and entertains the neighborhood kids — her head ticks like a clock!

No one knows what causes the loud ticking, which sounds like a giant grandfather clock. But it can be heard 25 feet away and earns Loretta plenty of unwanted attention.

"It disturbs people in movies and restaurants. And I haven't been able to go to church in years. People think I've got a clock hidden in my hat. But the ticking they hear comes from my head."

It all started one Sunday morning back in mid-May, when the good-natured mother of three and her husband, Brad, were awakened by the unusual ticking coming from their daughter.

You can look ten years younger with a miracle "fingertip face-lift" — and you can do it yourself at home, an expert says.

Simply by applying pressure with your fingers to key areas of your face you can erase wrinkles and sagging instantly, according to Dr. Robert Wilmer, author of a book on the subject called Touching Is...

"At your fingertips you have a safe, simple, effective means of achieving a do it yourself face-lift," said Dr. Wilmer, a skin care expert.

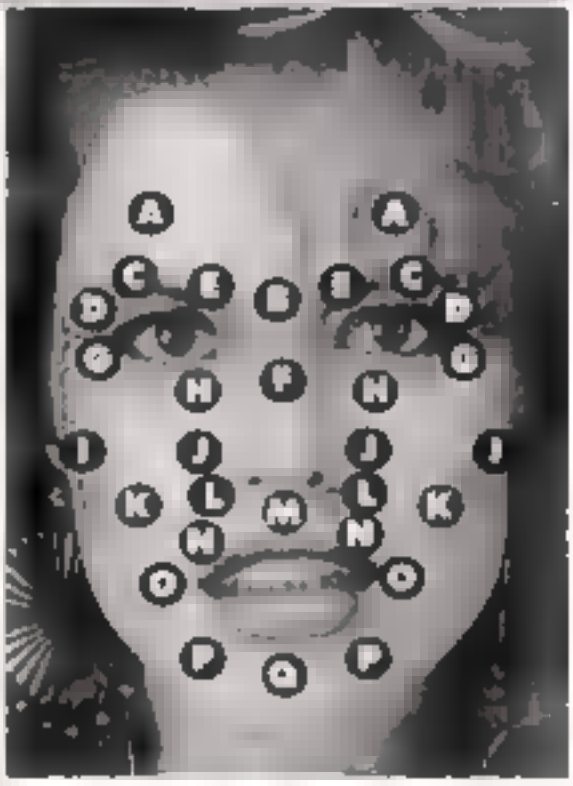
"There are no risks involved, no doctors' fees and no surgery or painful recuperative period.

"By using my technique, expensive muscle toning is relaxed and sagging muscle tone is tightened. The overall effect is the accentuation of facial features."

The tasty method — which consists of pressing or tapping certain points on your face for a specified amount of time — must be done three times per week for the first two weeks, twice a week for the next three weeks, and once a week for the following two weeks.

After that, depending on your own needs, put yourself on a maintenance schedule using the technique about once every two weeks.

To use the technique, refer to the picture on this page, where key wrinkle groups of the face are indicated by letters A to Q. Where the key wrinkles are located on both sides of your face, use the soft, pointed parts of the fingertips on both hands to treat the two areas at the same time.



EXERCISES

1. Wrinkles on forehead. Relax points A and C for two minutes. Then tastily point C for one minute.

2. Wrinkles of the upper eyelid and eyebrow area. Dab tastily points C and D for 2 minutes each.

3. Small wrinkles at the outer corners of your eyes. Relax points E, G and H for about three minutes each. Tastily point E for 60 to 90 seconds.

4. Wrinkles beneath the eyes. Tastily G and H for one minute.

5. Wrinkles running down your face. From the outer corners of your eyes to your jaw. Relax points I and O for three minutes. Tastily points K and Q the area between the eyes. Relax points F and F for two to three minutes. Then tastily point C for one minute.

6. Wrinkles of the upper eyelid and eyebrow area. Dab tastily points C and D for 2 minutes each.

7. Small wrinkles at the outer corners of your eyes. Relax points E, G and H for about three minutes each. Tastily point E for 60 to 90 seconds.

8. Wrinkles beneath the eyes. Tastily G and H for one minute.

9. Wrinkles running down your face. From the outer corners of your eyes to your jaw. Relax points I and O for three minutes. Tastily points K and Q your eyes down to your jaw line. Relax O for 4 minutes. Tastily points N and Q for one minute.

10. Wrinkles that run from your nostrils around your mouth and toward your chin. Relax points J and O for three minutes. Tastily points Q and N for one minute.

11. Wrinkles around the sides of your mouth. Relax points N, O and P for two to three minutes each. Tastily point K for one minute.

12. Wrinkles between your upper lip and nose. Relax points N and M for three minutes. Tastily points L, K and O for about 30 seconds.

Cruel owners break bears' legs — then put them to work to lure tourists

By DICK DONOVAN

Savage street beggars in Turkey have recently devised a sickening scheme to suck blood money from tourists — they break the legs of their dancing bears so they look more pitiful as they hobble around on crutches.

The tortured bears are controlled by a chain in a ring through their nose. A sharp tug from their cruel masters sends the poor creatures into a pathetic dance that brings a grunt of pain with every step.

The Turkish beggars haven't an ounce of pride in dignity. They'll pose and snap your picture

These bears are little more than cubs and the treatment they receive is shocking. World Wide News readers asked if you're as outraged as Bill and Nandi Schraft, you can make your anger known by dropping a card to:

SWEAT! IT KEEPS YOUR BRAIN FROM FRYING!

KEEP A COOL HEAD: Your brain would literally cook if the blood flowing to it was not cooled by perspiration.

By BOB ROGERS
Correspondent

The most amazing air conditioning system ever devised is right in our own bodies, and its key ingredient — sweat — keeps us alive.

Although humans can live and work in Arctic cold or Amazon heat, they are dramatically sensitive to variations in their own body temperature.

A rise or drop of just eight or 10 degrees can result in death.

Fortunately, the body has an elaborate internal thermostat and air conditioning system to help it maintain a safe temperature range.

When things get too hot, the body produces more sweat to get rid of excess heat.

Without this ability to sweat, heat produced in the muscles during vigorous exercise would fry the brain.

Even the inactive person sweats as much as a quart a day and some people, such as marathon runners, can easily sweat as much as two gallons.

When sweat evaporates it cools the skin. The skin in turn cools the blood, which is rushed to the surface by temperature-control cells in the brain.

The cooled blood then returns to the body's organs and muscles, cooling them.

Scientists tell us that the body has some 2.5 million sweat glands — about 400 in the square inch of skin, except in places like the palms of the hands, where as many as 3,000 are concentrated.

They share their space with more than 100 billion cells of varying kinds.

The nerve endings act as heat and cold sensors, sending a constant flow of signals to the brain.

Heat from the body's interior or reactive the skin mainly at the points where the sweat glands tend to concentrate — on the soles of the feet, the palms of the hands, the forehead, the armpits.

Studies indicate that men on have a slightly greater number of sweat glands than men.

But despite this, men are better than women at exercising in hot weather.

"While men lose their heat primarily by sweating, women lose their heat primarily by sending extra blood to the skin.

"And blood flow to the skin is blood that's not going to the muscles where it's needed," says Dr. Gabe Mirkin, who is a physician and coauthor of The Sports medicine Book 9,000-year-old chewing gum found in Sweden!

Archaeologists have found the world's oldest chewing gum — a 9,000-year-old piece complete with the teeth marks of a Stone Age teenager!

By ALEX MORGAN
Correspondent

"This is an important find that might change the way we look at our Stone Age ancestors," scientist Dr Bjorn Ahlberg told reporters. "Anyone who thinks cavemen were on the intellectual level of baboons might want to change their thinking."

"That shows Stone Age men were able to recognize their needs, gather the necessary raw materials and put together a successful product. They were a lot smarter than most people realize."

Dr Ahlberg found his remarkable wad of gum near Elmo in western Sweden.

Dr Ahlberg said the gum was probably very popular with cavemen on long hunting trips.

"It could take many hours, even days, for a Stone Age man to travel even a few miles on hunting expeditions in dense forests," Dr Ahlberg said. "I figure a hunter would carry a handful of this gum and pull pieces off to fight his hunger."

Down a Stone Age boy likely he known it and it years old.

"The teeth marks were not those of a full-grown Stone Age man," he said. "But a strong teen could have gone along on hunting trips."

"Or perhaps the gum was a tasty treat, a reward for a well-behaved Stone Age boy. Exactly how the boy ended up with the gum is one mystery we can never resolve for sure."

The excited scientist said the temptation for him to chew the gum is almost too much to resist.

"The gum is very hard and would be difficult to chew," he said. "But the very thought of chewing on gum produced by our Stone Age forefathers is a Rich exec quits the rat race — to live like a caveman!

By B. NEALE LIND

Fat cat executive Michael Andrews makes his living the old-fashioned way — he survives completely off the land. Just as Stone Age man did millions of years ago!

Millionaire was tired of chasing almighty dollar!

Andrews, a former multi-millionaire executive of a large intelligence company, says he just got fed up with chasing the almighty dollar. He retired in 1987 and bought a 10,000-acre estate near Johannesburg, South Africa, where he now lives as a primitive existence.

The land is that land was the last purchase he ever made.

"Thinking about making money all the time was giving me ulcers and heart problems," says Andrews. "I was a slave to my checkbook and credit cards. I couldn't see the beauty around me.

"Now I live as man was meant to live. I haven't cashed or spent a dime in six years. I don't write checks, ride in cars or wear shoes — and I've never been happier in my life. Everything I need is right and weapons, and plants of fresh running water.

Andrews lives behind the brick walls of his estate with his wife in a cave that he dug himself using a handmade stone shovel. He dresses in clothes he makes from the skins of animals he's killed.

The former exec has even built a crude bicycle with stone wheels and a wooden frame that he rides for exercise.

The radical change from businessman to caveman began one Thursday when Andrews left for work at his office and realized he'd left his wallet and checkbook at home.

BURIED ALIVE — IN HIS MOTHER'S GRAVE!

Earth swallows up [redacted] putting flowers at tombstone!

NEWTOWN, Pa. — Terrified Ken McLaughlin was nearly buried alive for 2½ frightening hours when the ground gave way as he planted flowers on his mother's grave.

"It was like being mired in quicksand. The more I moved my legs the worse it got," Ken told Weekly World News.

"To make matters worse, my right foot was stuck under my mother's tombstone."

The 28-year-old bachelor had driven here from his home in nearby Levittown to plant azaleas on the grave of his mother, Frances Lee McLaughlin, who died a year ago during heart by-pass surgery.

"I visit her grave on holidays, her birthday and when ever else I can.

"I take care of her grave, plant flowers and pull weeds from around it. I want her to know how much I loved her.

"All of a sudden the ground gave way beside her grave and I sank up to my chest.

I screamed for help but people ignored me. One guy [illegible] drove by in a car, slowed down to look at me and then took off.

"I guess he didn't want to get involved."

The panicked man managed to stay afloat in the dirt 2½ hours later as darkness fell.

Two kids riding bikes through the cemetery heard his frantic cries and called police.

Mr. Laughlin, a security guard, escaped from the ordeal without injuries.

A police spokesman said recent rains caused an adjacent grave to cave in, trapping Mr. Laughlin.

"One thing's for sure," he said. "I don't think I'll go back there soon."

THE GREAT PYRAMIDS as they looked when they were built around 3300 B.C., are shown in this computerized conception.

By MICHAEL TODD
Special news correspondent

GREAT PYRAMIDS ARE UPSIDE DOWN!

Space aliens designed them ■ UFO landing pads — & flipped them over when they left Earth 4,500 [illegible] ago!

CAIRO, Egypt — The ancient pyramids are upside down!

That startling explanation comes from a respected archaeologist who has unearthed ancient drawings showing the pyramids in their original form — carefully balanced on their tips.

"It is obvious from the drawings I've found that the pyramids were originally built with tiny bases and large, flat tops," archaeologist Abdel Gallaf told reporters.

"These drawings are at least 300 years older than anything that has been found before."

But even more amazing is Dr. Gallaf's theory that the pyramids were built to serve as landing pads for alien spaceships.

"It is well documented the aliens visited Earth — and specifically Egypt — 4,500 years ago, around June 14," he said. "It is clear to me that aliens had the pyramids built this way so they could have wide, flat landing areas high above the desert sand.

TODAY: Egypt's Great Pyramids are actually upside down, according to ancient drawings recently discovered and Egyptians did not have friendly relationships," Dr. Gallaf said. "All indications are that the aliens used the Egyptians as slaves during the construction."

I speculate that the pyramids were built with the smallest possible bases in order to save on the amount of stone used in the structure. How the builders balanced them on the tips is a mystery we cannot even begin to understand."

Dr. Gallaf's theory also explains how the pyramids ended up as they appear today.

"When the aliens were finished with Earth they simply [illegible] and [illegible] to the way they are [illegible] now," Gallaf explained. "The last Alien Marriage [illegible] Now that there is evidence to prove it we must look for [illegible] explanations [illegible] be scientifically acceptable to [illegible] and bakerfs."

Dr. Gallaf's theory might also explain why the pyramids were built in the first place.

"It is my belief that the aliens played a role in the construction of the pyramids and built them to serve their own purposes," Dr. Gallaf is currently collecting funds in his effort to turn at least two of the three Great Pyramids into their points again.

"If we could see what is on the bottom of these pyramids it would be absolute conclusive proof of my theories. I am certain there would be evidence of UFO [illegible]

You can make the most of on-the-job smoke breaks with Break Time cigarettes — the longest-lasting butts in the world!

"Break Times are the first real innovation in cigarettes since the development of the filter tip back in the 1930s," David Dekeyrout, who reports on trends in the tobacco industry, told reporters in Raleigh, N.C.

"Unlike regular cigarettes, which are the size of a finger, Break Times are 12 inches from tip to tip and stretch out to about the size of a ruler. Some people might think they look ridiculous.

"But for workers who get just one or two cigarette breaks a day — breaks that last only as long as it takes to smoke a single cigarette — Break Times really are a thing of beauty.

"Regular cigarettes last five or seven minutes, while Break Times last 30 or 35 minutes. The letters on the side of the pack, 'L.C.M.L.B.', are an abbreviation for the slogan Longer Cigarettes Mean Longer Breaks.

TOBACCO expert David Dekeyrout

"And that's what Break Times are all about."

By BRENT MOORE
Sports correspondent

Break Times are the brainchild of a French cigarette manufacturer and are available domestically in a handful of tobacco shops that carry exotic brands.

A spokesman for the company, Jacques Predalet, says the firm is now negotiating with a U.S. manufacturer and hopes to have Break Times rolled and packaged in North Carolina or Virginia under a special licensing agreement by the end of the year.

"Break Times are sold as a novelty item in France but in the U.S. we anticipate workers and heavy demand because as the job smoking is more heavily restricted," Predalet explained from his office in Paris.

"It isn't true everywhere, of course, but more and more companies are limiting workers to one or two cigarette breaks a day. And the only way to stretch those breaks is to buy and smoke longer cigarettes.

"Break Times certainly fit the bill."

Like most other cigarettes, Break Times come in packs of 20 — but that's where the similarity ends.

For one thing, the packs are larger because the cigarettes are getting more tobacco, they sell for around $4 a pack, compared to $3 to $3

Salvation Army started in U.S. by 16-year-old girl

ELIZA SHIRLEY

...and a town drunk!

By SARAH CARPENTER / Correspondent

Over a hundred years ago, in 1878, a 16-year-old girl launched an organization in America that has relieved human suffering on a grand scale — the Salvation Army.

But Eliza Shirley might have failed in her mission had it not been for a fire in a tar barrel and a watery town drunk.

Born in England, Eliza joined the Salvation Army in Coventry when she was 15. When her family immigrated to Philadelphia she asked the Salvation Army founder — General William Booth — if she could try to launch the Army here.

Booth gave his permission, but warned her she would be entirely on her own.

Eliza bravely decided to take the risk. In 1878 she and her mother, Annie, moved to Philadelphia and started searching for a place to hold meetings. Finally they came across an old abandoned cigar factory that had recently been used as a stable.

Eliza thought it would do. Few workers had other ideas.

"That is the perfect place to worship. People around here never came out of," said Annie.

Eliza answered, "Remember, Mother, Jesus was born in a stable and this is good enough for the birth of the Salvation Army in America."

Eliza talked her mother into renting the factory. They cleaned it up and put up posters announcing the opening of their church. But crowds didn't come.

Then one night some mischievous boys started a fire in a tar barrel near the factory. The blaze drew a huge crowd — and Eliza, seeing her chance, began preaching to the throng.

In the crowd was the town drunk, a bit Buddy. "Can your God do anything for a wreck like me?" he asked.

By the end of the evening Buddy was a convert — and he became the first "soldier" in America's new Salvation Army. Soon people were flocking to hear Eliza preach.

Eliza's father gave his job at a local mill and opened a second church in west Philadelphia.

Then he wrote General Booth in London and told of their success in America — and the delighted Booth wrote back that he was sending seven more officers. Booth then appointed Eliza a captain in the Salvation Army.

Desperate mom offers to give her baby away — on office bulletin board!

By SALLY CARRUERA
Correspondent

Single mom Olivia Montez caused a furor with the notice she posted on the bulletin board at work — offering her baby free to a good home!

Incredibly, the 23 year-old Mexican electronics assembly worker says she can't understand what all the ruckus is about. Arranging private adoptions is legal in Mexico City where she lives, and her landlord won't allow children. She says she needs to ditch her 18-month-old son Jose in order to keep her government subsidized apartment because she can't afford a more expensive place.

"FREE TO GOOD HOME!" read the headline on the bizarre notice Olivia posted beside a picture of her son on August 26. The item continued:

"Please let me live with you, says this adorable 18-month-old baby boy. This 25-pound cutie is nearly potty trained and eats well! Good, so he's no trouble. He's yours for the asking if you want to adopt him — and I'll always be your baby's supply of baby food as a bonus. Landlord says he's got to go. All shots current. Call Olivia, Ext. 314."

The notice, written in Spanish and English because Olivia works for an American company, caused a stir among the 144 employees at Olivia's workplace. To explain her actions, the mom has granted several interviews with the local media.

"Everybody got so upset about this," bubbled Olivia said in an interview with a local magazine. "I don't understand it. I'm real fond of Jose and of course I intend to find him a good home, a loving home where he will be well taken care of.

Olivia Montez

"I want him to have a good life.

"People tell me they can't understand why I would give my baby away. Well, to me it makes perfect sense. His dad doesn't want him and has never shown the slightest interest in him.

"I'm single as I don't want a husband. I'm not ready to settle down. I'm young and I can always have another. Meanwhile, I can't find another subsidized apartment. They're few and far between and you have to wait years to get one. I don't want to lose my low rent, know just because I happen to have a baby."

Outraged co-workers and representatives of child welfare groups have condemned Olivia's plans. But the mom-to-be says she sees nothing wrong with what she's doing.

Meanwhile, several couples have responded to the notice and offered to take the little boy.

"They're nice people, but I'm going to wait a little while before I decide who's going to get Jose," the baby's mom says. "I'm going to be real picky about this.

"I want Jose to have the best he can possibly get in life. What's all the more reason

HOLY RATS!

World's [illegible] bizarre religion tells members to worship rodents!

By E. NEALE LIND / Special correspondent

Every day, thousands of devoutly religious people dress in their finest clothes, go to a beautiful marble temple and offer their prayers — to a roomful of filthy live rats!

The disease-carrying rodents are considered sacred in Deshnoke, India, and the villagers there not only pray to them, they feed them, tend to them and bring them expensive gifts.

"These animals are holy," says Ganga Dhar, head priest of the Shri Karni Mata temple. "They are the living reincarnations of our departed loved ones. We treat them with great respect and love."

The private temple contains several large rooms, all of which are teeming with the pampered vermin.

The floor of one huge room, known as the "Gifts Chamber," is a solid brown carpet of rats which continue to multiply unchecked as villagers walk barefoot through their midst and set platters of cheese, grain and rice before them.

Although the smell is overpowering and the floor tiles are caked with rat droppings, believers still kneel and touch their foreheads to the floor as rats lick at their hair and face.

The temple was built back in 1900 as a tribute to the Hindu goddess Shri Karni Mata who, followers believed, would one day come to Earth in the form of a rat.

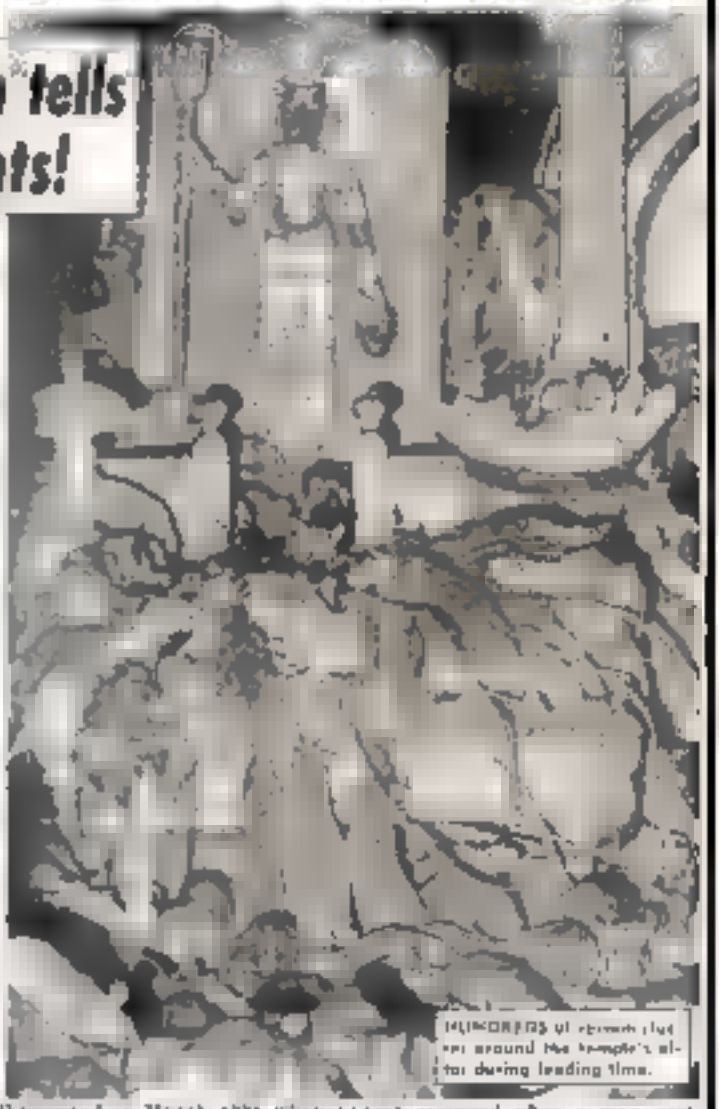
"The goddess Karni has instructed us to honor and revere rats," says Ganga Dhar. "And that's exactly what we do here at the temple.

"In return, Karni Mata vows she will keep our village eternally safe."

Although many Westerners call the rat worship a crude and dirty superstition that should be abolished, residents of Deshnoke say their claims of eternal protection are backed up by facts.

"We believe the rats protect us from natural disasters," says 61-year-old Gauri Prabhu, a villager who has been worshipping at the temple since he was a small child. "And the proof is that while neighboring villages have suffered plagues, famines and damage to their homes from storms, our own village has had no such trouble in the almost 450 years we've been worshipping the rats."

FAITHFUL villagers offer gifts of food to the sacred animals.



WORSHIPERS of rodents line up around the temple's altar during feeding time.

WIFE TAKES 1,000-FOOT DEATH LEAP OVER HUSBAND'S SNORING!

Distraught Dominique Dauserre leaped to her death from a 1,000-foot cliff because of her husband's deafening snoring. "I've tolerated this nightmare through 31 million years of marriage," Dominique, 63, wrote in a suicide note found in her car parked near the cliff's top miles from Marseilles, France. "I just can't stand another sleepless night." Her heartbroken husband, Pierre, declined to talk to reporters but police said he was devastated by his wife's death. A German tourist taking photos near the cliff snapped this incredible picture of Dominique seconds after she jumped to her death

MOSQUITO PIZZA!

Man spices his food with juicy insects!

BLOOD SUCKING bugs are trapped in Clifford's net.

CLEVER cook Larry Clifford sprinkles mouth-watering mosquitoes on his irresistible pizza supreme.

Amateur cook Larry Clifford is an expert at the meat guy until he heads for the kitchen to whip up a batch of cookies or pizza supreme — sprinkled with mouth-watering mosquitoes.

Clifford, 45, is one of the few gourmets you'll ever meet who traps, cooks and eats mosquitoes.

"It's not my regular job. It's just something I do," says Clifford, assistant superintendent at Crowley's Ridge State Park in north eastern Arkansas.

"Quite frankly, mosquitoes have kind of a fishy taste, like anchovies."

His mosquito pizza supreme recently won first prize in the 9th annual Great Mosquito Assault in Paragould.

His specialty beat out such scrumptious delicacies as gently poached mosquitoes and bioengineered mosquitoes.

A light inside an old concrete bunker attracts the mosquitoes at night. Clifford scoops them up with a net and puts them in a glass jar until he's ready to kill them for cooking.

"I dry them out in skillet, then crush them with a rolling pin," he says. "I just sprinkle one level cup of skeeters and two cups of cheese over regular pizza and bake at 325 degrees until done," Clifford adds. "There are so many different colors of cheese in the average pizza, the mosquitoes blend right in.

"Most people don't ask, 'What are those black things?' They just dig right in."

His mosquito chip cookie recipe is not much different than chocolate chip cookies. He substitutes cranberry for chocolate chips with brown sugar and cookie dough.

Scrumptious mosquito recipes!

Mosquito Meat Loaf

1½ lbs. ground beef
2 eggs
½ cup oats
1 tbsp. chopped onions
4 oz. can tomato sauce
2 cups dead mosquitoes
Sauce or ketchup
½ tsp. celery salt
1 tsp. brown sugar
2 tsp. Worcestershire sauce

Put all servings, form ingredients into a loaf. Place wave at high five minutes then 20 percent power for 35-40 minutes.

Mosquito Apple Pie

½ cup water
2 tbsp. all purpose flour
½ cup ground allspice
1 cup ground mosquitoes
3 cups peeled sliced apples
2 tbsp. lemon juice
1 stick pie crust mix
½ tbsp. water

For six servings combine cream mix with water. Bake until light brown. Toss remaining ingredients together, pour into crust. Bake 10 minutes on high.

Tuna Mosquito Casserole

1 16-oz. can creamy chicken-mushroom soup
½ cup milk
½ cup chopped celery
1 cup diced mosquitoes
6-oz. shoestring potatoes
6½-oz. can chunky tuna
½ cup toasted almonds
1 cup shredded American cheese
2 tbsp. snipped parsley

For six servings, combine soup, milk, celery, mosquitoes, potatoes, tuna, almonds, cheese and parsley. Pour into a 1½-quart casserole. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes or until heated through. Sprinkle with parsley.

Editor's note: Mosquitoes are attracted at night by light and by the scent of rotten manure. They can be caught without standing water with a net. Another source of skeeters could be your cranky mosquito com-

TUBE BOOB!

TV ADDICT: Robert Iacrupe

Man shot in face bleeds to death — because he won't stop watching TV!

By JACK ALEXANDER / Staff writer

A diehard TV freak couldn't bear to tear himself away from the tube for two days — even though he'd been shot in the face and was slowly bleeding to death.

Instead, dying weirdo Robert Iacrupe, 30, watched the boob tube, drank soda, snacked and worked crossword puzzles until the end came.

"I am my own doctor, and the body heals itself," he told his girlfriend, Deborah Ann Reynolds, 28, and her daughter, Deanna, 12.

As it turned out, he was dead wrong.

Iacrupe was shot flush in the face with a .25-caliber bullet by his girlfriend during a quarrel, but he wouldn't let her or her daughter get him medical attention, cops said.

Deborah Ann told cops Iacrupe never complained about the gunshot wound or the pain during the two days before he died.

"He was so hooked on TV he begged his girlfriend and her daughter to drag him from the bedroom to the living room on a throw rug so he could watch one of his favorite shows," Pennsylvania State Trooper James Miles said.

Deanna testified that Iacrupe was "very, very angry" when she tried to dial Westmoreland County's 911 center.

"I was afraid of him," she told police.

In the early morning hours of the third day, Iacrupe insisted the two women take him to his mother's house in nearby Lyciprus.

"He asked to be dropped off a block or so from his mother's house so he could walk the rest of the way," a trooper said. Iacrupe apparently let himself into his mother's house, collapsed on the kitchen floor and died. That's where his mom, Hazel Iacrupe, found his body at 3:40 p.m. Deborah Ann admitted shooting Iacrupe during a heated argument, according to Trooper Miles and County Detective Thomas Horan.

"I feel I shot him in self-defense," she said in her statement.

Deborah Ann was jailed without bond on charges of homicide, aggravated assault and reckless endangerment.

SUPER KID!

LITTLE HE-MAN Tommy Burg barely strains as he hoists this car. The Florida boy says his ambition is "to become the strongest man in the world."

Amazing 7-year-old Florida boy lifts 3,000-lb. car with his bare hands!

Tommy Burg looks no different from any other feisty little 7-year-old. But he's a pint-size powerhouse who can do what few grown men can do — lift a 3,000-pound car with his bare hands!

And if that doesn't watch him flex his muscles and bend a half-inch steel rod into knots, pull a fully-equipped police cruiser from a dead stop with a chain or tow a 25-foot fishing boat while swimming!

"That boy is an honest-to-goodness Atlas, that's the plain and simple truth," declared Stan Brennan, a Miami, Fla., physical therapist who helps Tommy train.

"IT'S REALLY not that big a deal," says Tommy, who tips the scales at a skimpy 53½ pounds.

"He weighs 53½ pounds, but his appearance is really very deceiving," Brennan added.

"He's like an African Zulu warrior — lithe and lean, with no bulging muscles, but with the hidden strength of a dozen men."

While others gape and marvel at his amazing feats of strength, the one person least impressed is modest Tommy himself.

"It's really not that big a deal," he said with a shrug of his skinny shoulders.

"I train like crazy every day to develop my strength. Any other boy my age would probably be as strong as me if they trained every day, too.

"But someday I want to become the world's strongest man. Mr. Brennan says I will if I keep on working hard.

"When I get older, I'll start lifting weights a lot to add muscle where I'll need it to do heavier stunts.

"Right now, all I do is isometrics so that I don't risk hurting my body.

"But when I get older, I want to pull bigger things... like a 747 jet, a semi-trailer rig, a bus and a diesel locomotive.

"That would be really neat.

"And I hope it'll make me so famous that I can move to Hollywood and be a movie stuntman."

Tommy has the full support of his parents, who allow him to spend as much time training as he wants — as long as he doesn't neglect his chores or his schoolwork.

"Sometimes I miss playing with my friends," Tommy admitted.

"But I guess that's one of the sacrifices I have to make if I want to become the strongest man in the world — and land a job as Hollywood's top stuntman."
